Dreams come true

Rite of passage. Getting properly decked out to attend the high school prom in style was an impossible wish for these teens — until a local nonprofit run by a master networker found a way to make it happen. PAGE 02

Prom with a little help from friends and several strangers

North Philly. A master networker reaches out to help a girl find a dress, a ride and just about everything else.

Rasheeda Butler, 17, is escorted to her prom by longtime friend Yerodin James. / CHARLES MOSTOLLER

Rasheeda Butler was surrounded by a half-dozen people in the small middle bedroom of her aunt's rowhouse. As relatives fussed with her hair, some cousins stood around watching the action.

A growing crowd had gathered outside of the North Philly rowhouse to see her prom dress. The commotion had left her feeling, in her words, overwhelmed and stressed.

"I know, in the end, it's going to be a great experience, but..." she said.

It's prom season. In a city where 22 percent of people under 18 live below the poverty line, it's no surprise that many struggle to cobble together what they need to attend the last formal dance of high school.

Rasheeda, 17, was one of them, until she got a little help.

"We were trying to find the cheapest dress," Butler said.

They found one on Instagram they liked. Her mom struggled to put down a deposit. Then it turned out to be a scam, and their money was gone.

Enter Lakeia Williams and her nonprofit, We Can Do Better.

Williams, 36, is a master networker the school district called in for a few students — some of them in shelters — that the district recognized needed a little help getting to prom. She's put together prom packages like this for the last three years.

"I get sponsors," Williams said, ticking off their names. "I called them and said, 'This is what I want to do.' And we got it done."

She put out a call on Facebook and quickly found people that would donate money for shoes, fabric for a dress and costume jewelry.

"It's something extra-special," Williams said. "They work so hard to get to their senior year."

Rasheeda's need hit close to home for Tylia Henry, 33, a single parent and student at the Art Institute of Philadelphia. An aspiring fashion designer who works under the name Majeeda Monae, she agreed to sew a dress that looked just like the one Rasheeda wanted — for free.

"You go through something, and you empathize," Henry explained on why she wanted to help.

Rasheeda, a senior at Edison High School, is evaluating scholarship offers from two colleges and is leaning toward studying funeral services at Northampton Community College.

"I like weird," she said.

Her mom, Vernice Hendricks, calls Rasheeda a hard worker who was pushed along by two older brothers.

"Her main goal, she says, is to take care of her mom. I just want her to be happy," Hendricks said.

But Friday night wasn't about any of that. It was about a car waiting to take her to the prom and a well-dressed neighbor who was taking her.

Rasheeda emerged from her aunt's house to a waiting throng. Dozens of neighbors whipped out their cell phones to get a picture of her in front of the house.

"Beautiful," said her date, Yerodin James. "She looks beautiful."

Crime. Twenty charged in teen sexting ring

Twenty people have been charged as part of a teen sexting ring at Cape May Regional High School and a middle school in New Jersey.

Prosecutors say the accused — 19 of them are juveniles — traded nude pictures of underage girls on cell phones and social media.

The investigation began April 23 when a girl told school officials that boys were distributing naked pictures of a friend. School officials alerted police, who searched 27 cell phones.

All were charged with invasion of privacy. Juveniles in the case could spend two years in a juvenile detention facility, while the adult faces three to five years in state prison. DAN KELLEY

Man holding infant hostage killed by SWAT

Scott McAllister, 39, was killed by a SWAT team around 4:30 a.m. yesterday in Middleton Township after a five-hour standoff during which he was allegedly holding his 17-month-old son hostage.

According to the N.J. Attorney General's Office, McAllister's wife called 911 at 11:30 p.m. Tuesday and told police that McAllister was drunk, had beaten her, was armed with a knife and was threatening to harm their child, and he had locked himself inside the house with their child.

A negotiator attempted throughout the night to get McAllister to surrender. He did not, and SWAT entered the house. He allegedly was holding a knife near his son, and they fired, killing him.

Rape suspect caught on cam

Philadelphia police on Wednesday released surveillance video of the man accused of sexually assaulting a 35-year-old woman in her South Rosewood Street home.

Police say the victim was awoken at 4:30 a.m. Monday by the masked suspect standing over her bed. He placed his hand over her mouth, demanded cash and took $10 before sexually assaulting her, police say. He also took her house keys and her roommate's ID when he left.

Police believe the suspect may be behind a March 26 rape just blocks away on the 1700 block of Chadwick Street. In both cases, the suspect is described as wearing red gloves.

Philly electricians say state needs more solar power

Green energy.
Electricians' union supports more state spending on solar.

Left, IBEW Local 98 Business Manager John Dougherty speaks about the solar power industry; right, local 98 apprentices stand with a large solar panel. / CHARLES MOSTOLLER

The International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers (IBEW) Local 98's training headquarters at 1719 Spring Garden is now 25 percent powered by solar panels on the building's roof, members say. Down the street, their financial offices at 1701 Spring Garden are 10 to 15 percent powered by panels on the roof.

"We're going to be ahead of the curve when it becomes ever more popular," said Tom Kowal, 40, a fifth-year apprentice in IBEW's solar panel training program.

Kowal and JJ Kedra, 32, also an apprentice, both said learning the new skills is "absolutely" positive for their careers — although Kedra acknowledged it's still a costly technology.

"It's still in the infancy stages. The more that it's getting done, the costs will come down," Kedra said.

The IBEW was joined Wednesday by Gov. Tom Wolf's Secretary of Policy and Planning John Hanger in calling on the legislature to pass a $50 million subsidy for solar energy in Wolf's budget under the PA Sunshine program.

"A dollar spent here can leverage up to three, four, five dollars of private investment," Hanger said.

"If the legislature does the right thing, these folks can be up on roofs in three, four, five months earning a decent paycheck."

The IBEW trains groups of about 50 apprentices at a time in solar panel technology, said Iggy Fletcher, IBEW's solar power instructor. He said it's definitely a growth industry.

"Look at the Eagles' stadium, look at their training facility, look at IKEA on Delaware Avenue — they all have solar," he said.

The PennEnvironment Research & Policy Center also released a study of solar panel usage Wednesday, among 70 large cities, that found Philadelphia to be ranked 26th for its total solar output.

Quoted

"With prices going down and concern about global warming going up, solar power is growing rapidly in our state."

Santorum announces White House intentions

Presidency. The former U.S. senator from Pennsylvania announced the beginning of his campaign Wednesday.

Former U.S. Senator Rick Santorum of Pennsylvania, a Christian conservative, announced on Wednesday that he will make another run for the Republican presidential nomination in 2016 after a failed attempt in 2012.

Santorum, a senator from 1995 to 2007, will make the announcement near his childhood home in Cabot, Pa., later in the day.

ABC News said it had scheduled an interview with the candidate.

A representative for Santorum was not immediately available to comment on the report.

In the 2012 Republican race, Santorum won Iowa's kickoff contest and a string of later primaries with strong support from voters drawn to his social and religious conservatism and wary of the more business-oriented Mitt Romney.

Santorum outlasted other White House hopefuls to become the last remaining challenger to Romney, who ultimately captured the 2012 Republican nomination.

Santorum is the seventh Republican to formally declare a bid for the nomination, following fellow U.S. senators Marco Rubio, Rand Paul and Ted Cruz. REUTERS

Christian candidate

A Catholic, Santorum won a reputation as a strong social conservative in Congress, where he opposed same-sex marriage and the teaching of evolution in schools. He infuriated the gay community by comparing homosexuality to bestiality.

- He dropped out of the 2012 race after his daughter, who was born with a rare medical condition, was hospitalized. But he remained a public figure, fueling speculation about another presidential run.

FIFA officials arrested over corruption

Money. FIFA collects billions of dollars in revenue, mostly from sponsorship and television rights for World Cups.

The world's most popular sport was plunged into turmoil on Wednesday as seven powerful soccer figures were arrested on U.S. corruption charges and faced extradition from Switzerland, whose authorities also announced a criminal investigation into the awarding of the next two World Cups.

A 47-count indictment was unsealed early Wednesday morning in federal court in Brooklyn, New York, charging 14 defendants with racketeering, wire fraud and money-laundering conspiracies, among other offenses, in connection with the defendants' participation in a 24-year scheme to enrich themselves through the corruption of international soccer. The guilty pleas of four individual defendants and two corporate defendants were also unsealed.

The arrests of the senior FIFA officials in a dawn raid at a five-star Zurich hotel mark an unprecedented blow against soccer's powerful governing body. Swiss police arrested the seven officials — all from the Latin American and Caribbean region — and detained them pending extradition proceedings to the United States, which could take years if they contest the process. The Federal Office of Justice in Switzerland said that six would contest extradition, but that one person agreed to be extradited.

Separate from the U.S. investigation, Swiss prosecutors said they had opened their own criminal proceedings against unidentified people on suspicion of mismanagement and money laundering related to the awarding of rights to host the 2018 World Cup in Russia and the 2022 event in Qatar.

U.S. Attorney General Loretta Lynch told reporters at a news conference in New York her office did not want to impede the 2018 and 2022 World Cups but looked forward to working with Swiss authorities investigating the awarding of the tournaments. REUTERS

"As charged in the indictment, the defendants fostered a culture of corruption and greed that created an uneven playing field for the biggest sport in the world."

James Comey, FBI Director

Investigation

Additional arrests likely

U.S. prosecutors said they aimed to make more arrests but would not say whether FIFA President Sepp Blatter, for long the most powerful man in the sport, was a target of the probe. Blatter, 79, is standing for re-election to a fifth term at the FIFA Congress in Zurich on Friday, and FIFA said the vote would go ahead as planned.

The European soccer body UEFA called for the election to be postponed, saying "the European associations will have to consider carefully if they should even attend this congress." REUTERS

Message glitch

Apple finds bug that causes iPhones to crash

Apple has found a bug that can cause iPhones to crash when a message containing a specific string of text is received.

The bug, which includes symbols and Arabic characters, was first reported by Apple news blog MacRumors on Tuesday night, adding that it was noticed on social news hub Reddit earlier in the day.

"We are aware of an iMessage issue caused by a specific series of unicode characters, and we will make a fix available in a software update," an Apple spokesperson said in an email.

Sending a reply message or having someone send you a message can solve the problem, MacRumors added. REUTERS

Negotiations. CBS CEO met with Apple to discuss television deal

Apple TV may be the future of television. / GETTY IMAGES

CBS Corp. CEO Leslie Moonves met with Apple Inc. last week to discuss a TV deal, he said at a technology conference Wednesday, and that discussions and negotiations for such a deal are ongoing.

"We will probably do a deal with Apple TV," Moonves said during an onstage talk at a conference hosted by Re/code, an online-only technology publication, and added that he met last week with Eddy Cue, Apple's senior vice president of Internet software and services.

Moonves said that television is moving away from 200-channel subscription packages as people watch fewer channels. He said he believes Apple will offer a less expensive TV package with fewer channels. REUTERS

Five things you need to know

1 Virulent strain of deadly dog flu heads east

From January through April, doggie docs have feared this moment.

A violent strain of dog flu sickened more than 1,000 dogs in and around Chicago and killed six. And then, strangely, it stalled.

The rate of new infections involving canine influenza virus (CIV) strain H3N2 even slowed. It was a short-lived victory.

Suddenly, H3N2 was on the move, reports Fox and NJ.com., showing up in New York State, New Jersey and Massachusetts.

More than 5,000 dogs have caught the virus, which is generally treatable but comes with a cough, runny nose, lack of appetite and fever.

It is not known how the H3N2 strain was introduced into Chicago, but it could have been a dog from Asia who was a carrier and did not have active symptoms, said Keith Poulsen, diagnostic and case outreach coordinator with the Wisconsin Veterinary Diagnostic Laboratory.

Cook County officials have reported 1,137 cases in the Chicago area with six deaths. While an exact figure for the Midwest is not available, Poulsen believes it is less than 5,000 cases.

About 5 percent or fewer affected dogs die from the more familiar H3N8 strain — mostly older dogs or puppies. Fatalities from the new strain also are expected to be less than 10 percent of animals affected, Poulsen said.

2 Islamic State sympathizers may have made airline threats

Islamic State sympathizers may have been behind threats in the last two days to international flights using U.S. airports or flying over American airspace, law enforcement and security sources said.

The sources said that after 11 threats were received by U.S. law enforcement officers on Monday, at least four more were phoned in late on Tuesday.

The threats were similar, and the caller claimed the flights were carrying chemical weapons, they said, adding that investigators' theory was that sympathizers of Islamic State were responsible. REUTERS

3 Officials blame Tinder for rise in STDs

Rhode Island is freaking out because STD rates have risen. The state blames hookup apps like Tinder for having a hand in the increase.

CNN reports that "between 2013 and 2014, cases of syphilis grew by 79%. HIV infections were up 33% and gonorrhea cases increased by 30%. STD cases for young adults are growing at a faster rate than the rest of the population."

This isn't the first time the Internet has been blamed for aiding in the spread of sexually transmitted diseases. Craigslist was found to have helped push a 16% increase in HIV infections according to a study from New York University. MATT LEE

4 US military mistakenly transfers live anthrax to lab

The U.S. military mistakenly sent at least one live anthrax sample to a private laboratory in Maryland and possibly sent others to eight other states, a U.S. defense official said.

The official said the samples were meant to be sent in an inactive state for research purposes and added the samples were now believed to be secure.

The Pentagon said there was no public health risk.

It was not immediately clear if anyone in those laboratories might have been exposed before learning they had live, as opposed to inactive, samples. REUTERS

5 U2 manager Dennis Sheehan dies in LA hotel

Irish rockers U2 said their longtime tour manager, Dennis Sheehan, died in Los Angeles, where the band is performing part of its latest tour.

The Los Angeles County Coroner said Sheehan, 68, died Wednesday morning of natural causes at a hotel in West Hollywood. Sheehan's death came hours after the first concert Tuesday night of a five-show run at The Forum in Los Angeles, part of a 20-city tour.

"We've lost a family member. We're still taking it in," said lead singer Bono on the group's website. REUTERS

Judge. Yahoo must face national email spying class action in U.S.

A U.S. judge ordered Yahoo Inc. to face a nationwide class action accusing it of illegally intercepting the content of emails sent to Yahoo Mail subscribers from non-Yahoo Mail accounts, and using the information to boost advertising revenue.

In a decision late Tuesday night, U.S. District Judge Lucy Koh in San Jose, Calif., said people who sent emails to or received emails from Yahoo Mail subscribers since Oct. 2, 2011, may sue as a group under the federal Stored Communications Act for alleged privacy violations.

She also said a class of non-Yahoo Mail subscribers in California since Oct. 2, 2012, may sue as a group under that state's Invasion of Privacy Act.

Holders of non-Yahoo Mail accounts accused Yahoo of copying and then analyzing their emails, including keywords and attachments, with the goal of creating "targeted advertising" for its subscribers, in addition to detecting spam and malware.

They sought an injunction barring the alleged interceptions as well as damages from Yahoo.

Yahoo and its lawyers did not immediately respond on Wednesday to requests for comment.

Search and display

In 2014 Yahoo generated 79 percent of its revenue from search and display advertising.

Koh rejected Yahoo's arguments that some plaintiffs consented to its activity by emailing Yahoo subscribers even after learning how it used the information, and that the alleged injuries were too disparate to justify class certification.

She distinguished the case from her March 2014 refusal to certify a similar class action against Google Inc. on behalf of Gmail and non-Gmail subscribers because it was hard to determine which users consented to Google's activity. REUTERS

Not such a happy anniversary for Ben Affleck

ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

Ben Affleck and Jennifer Garner's 10th anniversary is just about a month away, but if these separation rumors are true, they won't be celebrating it together. "Ben and Jen are through," a source tells Radar Online. "He's told Jen that he wants the official statement to come out before their 10-year wedding anniversary on June 29." My math might be wrong, but I'm pretty sure that 10 is the tin or aluminum anniversary, not the divorce announcement anniversary. But maybe times have changed. Anyway, there's said to be a shared $150 million fortune at stake, so this should be fun.

Thank Miley Cyrus for more 'Grace and Frankie'

Ah, the power of social media. Or, more specifically, the power of Miley Cyrus' social media. Ever the influencer, the singer put out just a single tweet lauding Jane Fonda and Lily Tomlin's Netflix series "Grace and Frankie," and the results were truly impressive. "Let me say, it's so awesome to do a show on Netflix," series co-creator Marta Kauffman says. "Two and a half weeks after we launched, Miley Cyrus does a tweet about your show, and they call and say, 'We'd like to do a Season 2.' So yes, there is a Season 2. We have [Netflix boss] Ted [Sarandos] and Miley to thank." That's awesome, but is it too late to ask Cyrus to tweet something about "Happy Endings"?

Taylor Swift's friends not big on new beau

Taylor Swift seems to be having a fantastic time dating EDM star Calvin Harris, but her pals apparently aren't too thrilled and want her to kick his Scottish bum to the curb. "Calvin's putting on a front now," a pal reveals. "He used to date a bunch of club girls who were nothing like Taylor. If they ever came forward, it would hurt Taylor's brand," a source tells Life & Style. But Swift doesn't seem too concerned with her friends' concerns. "They are getting very serious, very fast," the source adds. "Taylor has already introduced Calvin to her parents." Well, that was certainly quick.

A 'tale of besties,' from Zooey and Lauren Conrad's BFF

Sophia Rossi has also written for "Glee," "The Hills" and "The City." / PROVIDED

Young Adult. HelloGiggles CEO Sophia Rossi is changing our culture to one where it pays to be nice.

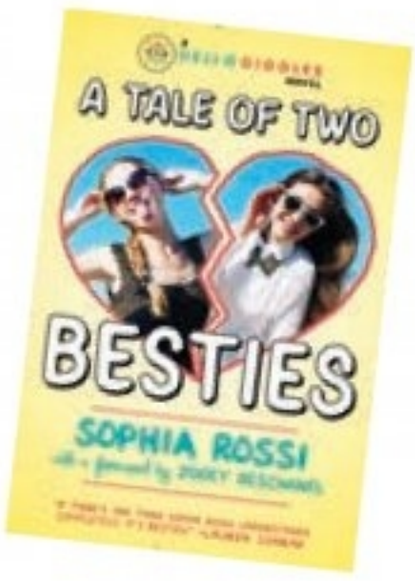
When Sophia Rossi launched the women's lifestyle site HelloGiggles in 2011 with her friend Zooey Deschanel, media wasn't exactly interested in women playing nice with each other. "Shows like 'The Hills' were based so much on fighting friendships," Rossi says. "We wanted to show that your friends are your family."

Four years later, the site has 16 million unique visitors per month and Rossi has a new book out, "A Tale of Two Besties," which celebrates female friendship.

What inspired you to write for teens?
I loved [Young Adult] growing up. I read all the "Sweet Valley High," "The Baby-Sitters Club" and "Nancy Drew" books. When HelloGiggles started, [Zooey and I] created a community of people who had youth as their interest, and I wanted to extend that into a book.

Did you reread the "Sweet Valley High" books as an adult?
I did reread a few of them! For my birthday, Zooey [bought] all the "Sweet Valley High" and "Baby-Sitters Club" books on eBay for me, so we have them in our office. Francine Pascal, who wrote the "Sweet Valley High" series, actually blurbed my book, which is like a dream.

Did you go through what the two friends in the book go through — trying to stay friends while going to different high schools?
Yeah, a little bit. I grew up in Beverly Hills and there are four middle schools that go into one high school. ... Some of my friends went to a neighboring high school, so I had to learn how to make new friends while still trying to see my old friends.



It's a huge deal when you're a teen! What was Zooey like in high school?
I didn't go to high school with her, but we had a lot of mutual friends. I think she was very much the same way she is now. ... She's always been super-smart and intuitive. And she's always been herself. I think that's why people really connect with her; whether you're like her or not, you connect to the idea that she's pure to her own efforts.

You guys were friends when you launched HelloGiggles together. Do you have any tips for going into business with a friend?
Yes. Celebrate your victories. I think we all get busy with our schedules, but it's nice to stop and say, "Let's get dinner and celebrate this." My other tip is having clear, defining roles, especially at a startup.

Who are your best friends now?
I have a few besties, but I don't like labeling them as that, because as Mindy Kaling says, "best friends" isn't a term, it's a tier. So I have a bunch. I just had a sleepover with my bestie Charlotte Ronson last night and her twin sister Samantha. And Lauren Conrad and I became so close when I was a writer for "The Hills." I really consider her a sister.

Kamala Khan is the new and exciting Ms. Marvel. / MARVEL

Some people went to barbecues over the holiday weekend. Some went to the beach. I went to my local comic book store to load up on female superheroes. Okay, I went to a barbecue too, but I spent my time there talking about comic books, which will surprise no one.

I've been writing about the new crop of heroines (or new versions of older ones) for a while, but I haven't had a chance to go deep into the stories. This week I got the "Ms. Marvel" trades. Not the old Ms. Marvel. The new one: Kamala Khan, created by editors Sana Amanat and Stephen Wacker, writer G. Willow Wilson and artist Adrian Alphona. She's the first Muslim character to headline her own comic. Kamala discovers she has inhuman genes and can shape-shift. She's a fangirl, naming herself after Carol Danvers, who is now Captain Marvel. She's a teenager who's dealing with real problems. She teams up with Wolverine. With all the superhero TV shows out there, there is a big, gaping hole and Kamala Khan should be the one to fill it.

There have been rumors about one show, though they're probably untrue. There are also rumors about her showing up in the Marvel Cinematic Universe. As much as I'd love to see her on the big screen, I don't think smashing her into a superhero film with a thousand others is going to do her justice.

In Ms. Marvel, we have a superhero similar in many ways to Peter Parker. She's dealing with the things we're all dealing with: sibling rivalry, parental issues, boys, her appearance, being different. I guess that's part of the reason I want to see her on the small screen more than someone like Supergirl. I mean, she's great. She's also a stunning blonde alien with superpowers who totally fits in. Awkward job or not, she's not that relatable. Kamala Khan is.

Marvel has a great crop of shows out there. "Daredevil" absolutely blew my mind. "A.K.A. Jessica Jones" is promising to be just as amazing. "Agents of S.H.I.E.L.D." came back from its slump and now has scores of loyal fans. We have dark and gritty. We have dark and fascinating. I'm happy with all of it. I just wouldn't mind seeing something different. Someone with a little light. Someone more like the rest of us. Now, who should we cast?

Live nude 'Girls'

Streaming. The new Netflix documentary 'Hot Girls Wanted' goes deep into Miami's porn scene

Young women live it up in Miami in "Hot Girls Wanted," premiering Friday on Netflix. / NETFLIX

RONNA GRADUS AND JILL BAUER
LARRY BUSACCA/GETTY IMAGES

"Hot Girls Wanted" co-directors Jill Bauer and Ronna Gradus stumbled upon the subject of their Sundance-lauded documentary by accident. The duo were looking to follow up 2012's "Sexy Baby," which looked at how pop culture, pornography and social media affect young women by exploring the male version of that experience. But a much more interesting story dropped in their laps.

"We ended up getting access to a porn recruiter's house in Miami," Gradus explains. "There's this recruiter, he posts ads on Craigslist and then small-town girls who want to get out of their towns click on these ads and get a free plane ticket to Miami and then a week later they're on a porn set. We just thought, 'Whoa, this is the story.'"

Given that two feature documentaries in a row for Gradus and Bauer have brought them into contact with the adult film world, they've become something of unexpected experts in the field, even being able to chart the changes to the industry. "The way that porn is being consumed online is the death of the porn studios," Bauer says. "A full-length feature porn film barely exists anymore. So much porn is free, so it doesn't pay for these companies to put a lot of money into production. This generation has grown up with watching porn clips. Would they even have the patience to watch a narrative story unfold? Maybe not. I don't know."

Bauer and Gradus have also been trying to get to the bottom of the central question of why so many young girls go in for porn in the first place. "There's not so much of a stigma now," Gradus admits. "But also, they are impulsive. They're 18, they don't think about it, they don't think that their dad's friend from work is going to have seen them. If the legal age that a girl could do this was 21 — the drinking age — it would probably be a huge bummer for the porn industry, I would just imagine."

Bauer concurs, but thinks there's another factor at work that has a lot to do with Kim Kardashian. "They feel a little bit of protection, naively. Like, 'There are so many girls, nobody's going to find me,'" Bauer says. "But of course everybody back home always finds out. But also they've grown up in a time when famous people made sex tapes."

David Oyelowo is putting on a one man show

Interview. The "Selma" actor has a pretty unusual movie coming to HBO this Friday.

While David Oyelowo might be best known to American audiences for his stellar performance as Martin Luther King Jr. in the epic civil rights drama "Selma," by the time he filmed his breakthrough role he'd already completed work on "Nightingale." The movie, which stars only him and premieres on HBO this Friday, tells the story of the deteriorating mental state of a vet named Peter Snowden as he tries to keep his life together after committing a very brutal act. Oyelowo is virtually unrecognizable as the same performer who played Dr. King — the only parallel between the movies is that they're both produced by Brad Pitt's production company, Plan B. We talked to him about being your own co-star and working with Pitt.

The film occasionally feels almost like a play, in the sense that it's a one-man show. Did that have any impact on how you made it?
I did learn it like a great big monologue. I didn't do what you may otherwise do, which is that you learn your lines for any given scene a couple of days before you actually shoot it. I felt that the level of immersion that I would want to subject myself to in playing this character would mean that I didn't really want to be in the head space of technically learning lines whilst shooting. But then the rest of the experience was that of a filmmaking one in terms of the nature of the way we shot the film. Because it's very intimate in the way that theater can't be. He's expressing very dark thoughts at times, right up close into the camera, and that employs a very different part of your artillery as an actor than the stage does.

Did you find yourself recalibrating your performance at all, since it's just you onscreen?
I don't feel like I did recalibrate what I would normally do as an actor. It was just doing what felt right and true for playing this particular role. I don't think we did anything that was technically different, per se, than what you would do in any other given film, but because of who he is, the way he expresses himself, the fact that this is a guy who will happily have a conversation with a three-way mirror means that the realms of the orthodox ways of either shooting a film or interacting with another character are kind of out of the window. So you're just doing whatever feels truthful given Peter Snowden's circumstances.

Peter spends a lot of time on the phone, either talking to people, or rehearsing talking to people. Was someone on the phone with you at those times?

We actually made the choice to never have anyone on the other end of the line. It was something I felt very strongly about because there are times with Peter where there is someone on the other end of the line and there are times when there isn't. It is someone he has manufactured in order for him to live with himself. The film starts with Peter having committed a heinous act and he has a mental condition that means that dealing with the repercussions of both what he has done and who he is is something that he is constantly pushing away. ... We wanted to keep the audience guessing as to whether he's actually talking to someone other than himself.

Famous friends

Colleagues

This is the second time you've worked with Brad Pitt, who also produced "Selma." Are you drawn to similar types of projects?

It's funny, because we've now had two projects together, but actually my friendship with him is very much linked to us being dads with lots of children. He has six, I have four, and we get together every now and again and watch our children tear the place up. But yes, we worked together on "Selma," and "Nightingale" was born out of that. While I was doing "Selma," we had already shot "Nightingale" and Dede Gardner and Jeremy Kleiner, who both run Brad's company Plan B, I showed them the film, which we had finished at that time. ... They saw it, showed it to Brad, and I remember him saying, my goodness, what a thing to go from Dr. King to Peter Snowden. His connection with "Nightingale" was very much from an actor's point of view. I think he was very interested in an actor putting themself through that exercise.

Back to their Roots

They might be on national TV every night, but, just in time for the sold-out Roots Picnic, Tariq Trotter promises, "Philadelphia always comes first."

CHRIS JORDAN
letters@metro.us

Tariq Trotter, aka Black Thought of the Roots, is going the distance — the 5 kilometers of his GrassROOTS "Roots Rock Run" that is, which takes place Saturday at 9 a.m. at the Anna Lane Lingelbach school on Wayne Avenue, prior to the start of the annual Roots Picnic at Festival Pier.

"I'll definitely begin with a bang," Trotter says. "I may not finish first, 10th or 20th, but I'm going to finish. It's important to set a standard of health and fitness that has the potential to influence the community. That's what I do."

The Roots — Philly natives, of course — certainly have a wide range of influences, thanks to the band's nightly duties on "The Tonight Show Starring Jimmy Fallon." The guys often perform skits on the program — Trotter recently delivered a breakdown rap about "Game of Thrones" — as well as collaborate with the evening's musical guests.

"You never feel like more of a credible, established, professional musician than at the times that you're blessed enough to interact with the likes of Paul McCartney, Bruce Springsteen or Elton John," Trotter says. "There's no time more than those occasions when I feel like we've arrived."

It comes back to Philly for The Roots, who were formed more than 25 years ago by Trotter and Ahmir "Questlove" Thompson at Philadelphia High School for the Creative and Performing Arts.

Thompson recently DJed at Silk City on Spring Garden in a revival of the long-running Tastytreats party, and Trotter serves on the boards of multiple groups in town including the Philadelphia Mural Arts Program. Both are involved in the CAPA Foundation, which raises money for their former high school.

"This is stuff that we do before New York, after New York," Trotter says. "Philadelphia always comes first. We could be broadcasting 'The Tonight Show' from Dubai every day, and we'd still be The Roots band from Philly."

At the Picnic

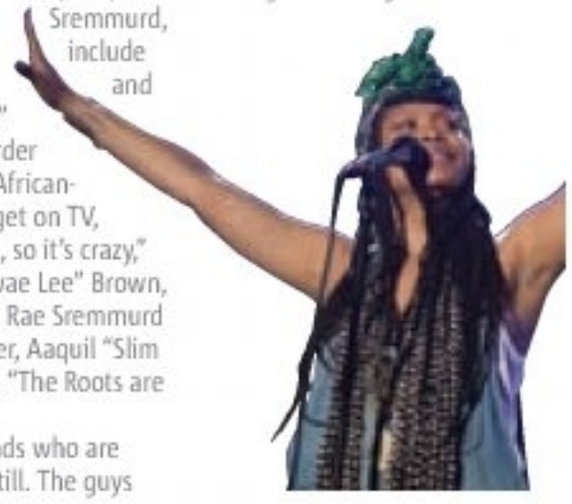
This year's Roots Picnic features hot acts like the Weeknd, A$AP Rocky and Rae Sremmurd, legacy artists Afrika Bambaataa and Erykah Badu with backing by The Roots, and local stars King Britt, Brianna Cash and Donn T, aka Thompson's sis.

The Roots are heroes to the young hip-hop duo Rae Sremmurd, whose hits include "No Type" and "No Flex Zone."

"It was harder back then for African-Americans to get on TV, and they did it, so it's crazy," says Khalif "Swae Lee" Brown, who makes up Rae Sremmurd with his brother, Aaquil "Slim Jimmi" Brown. "The Roots are legends."

Busy legends who are not standing still. The guys are working on a new Roots album and a new Trotter solo record, too.

"We definitely keep busy with speaking engagements, hosting events, family life," Trotter says. "This is all that we do that takes place outside of the 44 weeks per year that we're on five days a week doing 'The Tonight Show.'"



Chill out on The Porch

Michael Schulson is running the show at the outdoor venue, and turning up the heat in Midtown Village.

MJS RESTAURANTS

The Porch at 30th Street Station has a spiffy new look. IBG/MSR

The ramp-up to summer is a time of play over work for most. For Michael Schulson — chef/restaurateur behind Philly's Sampan and Independence Beer Garden and Atlantic City's Izakaya — there's no leisure time in sight. He's already expanded the menu at IBG, and is working on the upcoming Double Knot, a Japanese speakeasy next door to Sampan at 13th and Sansom, and Harp + Crown, a Southern cuisine restaurant up the street at 15th and Sansom. To add to that, he's setting up shop at The Porch at 30th Street Station, which launched for the season yesterday. "Philly restaurateurs work hard," says Schulson. "We can't half-ass anything."

That's especially true at The Porch, now that he is the sole vendor at the outdoor space, newly refurbished with greenery and porch swings courtesy of University City District, with design by Groundswell. Last year it hosted a variety of food trucks, but this year it's all Schulson.

Chicken wings at The Porch. REESE AMOROSI

He partnered with UCD to do "meals you'd get during a summer day on a porch," he says, and created a food truck concept, the Rotisserie, to serve juicy pork belly, honey-basted chicken wings, and lighter options like watermelon, tomato and feta salad. He also opened a free-standing vintage trailer retrofitted into a bar serving craft beers and cocktails. Both are slated to be open through October.

Over at IBG

Schulson and Chef Leo Forneas upped the game at Independence Beer Garden, and not just because they brought in ping pong tables and shuffleboard. "When we opened IBG in 2014, we didn't have much food and it wasn't that healthy," Schulson says, laughing. "This year, IBG's on another level."

There are still craft beers, including one created by Yards exclusively for IBG that's a light wheat brew. Foodwise, the menu now includes fried whole Lancaster-raised chickens alongside coleslaw, mac and cheese and baked beans, fish and chips, and grilled beef ribs, and lighter choices, such as beet and arugula or kale and raisin salads. "IBG's not just a place to drink," Schulson says.

It's open all summer and closes for the season in September.

Double Knot sneak peek

The Japanese spot next to Sampan will have an "antique Japanese decorative vibe," Schulson says. He describes the venue as a mixed-use coffee shop and bar with a "hidden Japanese speakeasy" serving sushi and robatayaki (grilled, skewered items). It opens in September.

Schulson also just got approval to build the two floors of Harp + Crown; construction should start next week. The menu will be Southern comfort food themed, with items like pickled watermelon and country ham and rice. It's slated to open early next year.

"Philly demands more," Schulson says of his new projects. "We'll make sure they get it."

Caribbean cruise to Belize

A cruise to Belize offers not just a lovely dose of Caribbean sunshine but a chance to see some spectacular natural and ancient sights.

Tobacco Caye

ALL PHOTOS CORBIE WINGATE/APA PUBLICATIONS

Belize, which is located next to Guatemala and Mexico in the Caribbean Sea, offers a mix of thick green jungle and white sand beaches. But there are plenty of draws that set this particular country apart from the destinations that are most likely to make up the rest of any Caribbean cruise itinerary.

Here, the lush forest — much of it protected by the environmentally conscious government — is filled with fascinating wildlife like howler monkeys and even colorful (yet elusive) toucans. There are a variety of ways to explore these deep woods, from zipline canopy tours and tubing down rivers to guided boat tours and hikes. There are also various types of iguanas and crocodiles and enough bird species to keep bird watchers content with a pair of binoculars for as long as they're in town. Belize is home to several animal sanctuaries that could be worth a visit as well, and they tend to focus on a single type of animal, such as monkeys or birds.

Trek through Belize's lush forests and you might spot howler monkeys, iguanas and toucans.

The coral reef just off Belize's coastline is as much, if not more, of a draw as the country's jungle landscape. Home to the second-longest reef in the world (right after the Great Barrier Reef in Australia), it's no surprise that diving down into the otherworldly underwater network of caves and snorkeling are popular pastimes here. Don a mask and fins, and you can look for fish, turtles and colorful coral.

One of the uniquely appealing aspects of Belize compared to other countries in this part of the world is that off its coast are tiny islands called cayes, a bit like the motu in French Polynesia. Most are uninhabited, and sun worshippers go there to swim in the clear blue water and lie on the sparkling sugar-white sand.

Whatever you decide to see, you will most likely have the option of booking through the cruise line or on your own through an independent tour operator. Be sure to compare pricing and what's included. And if your tour includes lunch, look for options that offer grilled local lobsters or the sweet fish that swim off the reef. INSIGHT GUIDES | SHERRI EISENBERG

Where to go

Western Caribbean cruise itineraries often call on Belize City, and this common port is a jumping-off point for a variety of different sites including several Mayan ruins.

- Altun Ha: This former Mayan city, about 30 minutes north of the port, contains stone ruins and temple pyramids.
- Lamanai: The name means "submerged crocodile" and the Temple of the Jaguar Masks here is full of legends. Many copper artifacts were recovered here.
- Xunantunich: Located 80 miles west of Belize City, near the Guatemala border, this site functioned as a ceremonial place for the Maya. It's said to be haunted by the ghost of a woman.

On the wing with Maine's birding trail

With eight distinct natural regions and over 300 avian species spotted annually, Maine makes a birder's heart take flight.

Birds love Maine. With tree-covered mountains, a long, gnarled coastline, and hundreds of lakes and marshes, it's as attractive to feathered tourists year-round as it is to human ones.

The Maine Birding Trail Booklet breaks down the state into natural geographic regions. Each section gives details of the best birding sites, including directions and amenities, the best time to visit and what birds you can expect to see. There's information about offshore birding cruises, hiking and camping, plus a list of guides to help you plan and tour.

The Birding Trail interactive website (www.mainebirdingtrail.com) is packed with information. You can download the 35-page booklet or use the online form to order a free print version.

Doo-wopping Wildwoods

MAD HEARTS PHOTOGRAPHY

Caribbean Motel

Echoes of the Ink Spots, the glow of neon and "Jetsons"-style motels make the Wildwoods, New Jersey, a lively, living museum of the doo-wop era.

Visiting the Wildwoods is a trip in the Wayback Machine. In the '50s and '60s, the fantasy-themed hotels, garish color palettes and unabashedly kitschy decor identified the trendiest beach resorts. It was called doo-wop, a vocal trend in popular music of the time.

When that fad ended, other towns replaced the unique motels and quirky street life with dull, homogenous buildings and lights. The Wildwoods, though, declared them historic landmarks, and it now has the largest concentration of doo-wop-era motels in the nation, with the colorful neon signs lending the streets a carnival air at night. Encouraged by the Doo Wop Preservation League, newer buildings run with the theme, creating a "Neo Doo-Wop" architecture.

The Doo Wop Experience Museum and Neon Sign Garden tells the resort's backstory and houses salvaged signs and '50s-era artifacts like dinette sets and boomerang tables. The outside garden has a collection of fully restored neon signs. The hour-long '50s Neon Night Tour travels through the unique architectural landscape on Tuesday and Thursday nights. Purchase tickets ($12 for adults/$6 for kids) at the museum.

The Starlux

Two doo-wop motels to try are the Caribbean (www.caribbeanmotel.com) and the Starlux (www.thestarlux.com). A member of the prestigious Historic Hotels of America, the Caribbean has 1950s decor with 21st-century amenities. The Starlux also has that '50s feel and two restored Airstream trailers, if you want to experience retro RVing.

The Wildwoods saved these buildings by declaring them landmarks.

Letters to the editor

The whole picture

Re: 'People are safer when they see cops as allies, not enemies' (Metro, May 27) Mr. Giarratani's opinion on seeing police as allies fell far short of explaining the whole picture of violence. Many police are honest and sincerely desire the safety of the communities they work in, but when some do not, we cannot condone or excuse them. We pay police to protect us, we don't pay criminals, and so police must be held to a higher standard. And when someone dies in their custody, that IS something that must be rectified. The fact that it so often hasn't is one of the reasons for rioting. Secondly, the biggest issue impacting the safety of communities is gun violence. Yet every time anyone mentions gun reform, it stirs such fear-based rhetoric from the NRA, politicians, etc., that no meaningful discussion can take place. It is not fair to police, and it is not fair to violent communities to ignore the impact that guns have on safety. Furthermore, the narrative that "everything was better in the '50s" is simply not true. Black people were still being lynched — while policemen and others watched! The idyllic picture that is painted by many people about those times ignores the experiences of minorities. Watch "Selma" for a picture of "the good old days" from a perspective different than your own, Mr. Giarratani.

Phillies have No. 4 prospect

ESPN's Keith Law, a MLB scouting expert, has ranked Phillies future shortstop and former first-round pick J.P. Crawford as the fourth-best prospect in baseball. "He's an elite defender with tremendous bat-to-ball skills who profiles as a true leadoff type with his ability to hit for average," Law said.

FANTASY BASEBALL: TRY TO STEAL THESE HOT WHEELS

In poker, we shouldn't be trying to get good hands — we should be trying to win pots. In a category game like fantasy baseball, we shouldn't be trying to assemble the team of best players — we should be trying to score more points than our opponents. The steals category in baseball is one worth attacking just like we attack blocks in fantasy basketball. Since so few guys are prolific in the category (only 15 players had 30+ steals last year), we can make huge gains by sacrificing the power stats to get some cheap speed:

Spang the monkey

Cory Spangenberg has a lot going for him. The 24-year-old was the 10th overall pick in the 2011 draft, he stole 104 bases in 374 minor league games and he's eligible at three positions in most leagues (OF, 2B, 3B). By forming a platoon with both Jedd Gyorko and Will Middlebrooks, he's getting the starting nod nearly every day.

NBA draft top 3

The top 3 draft positions provide nice landing spots:

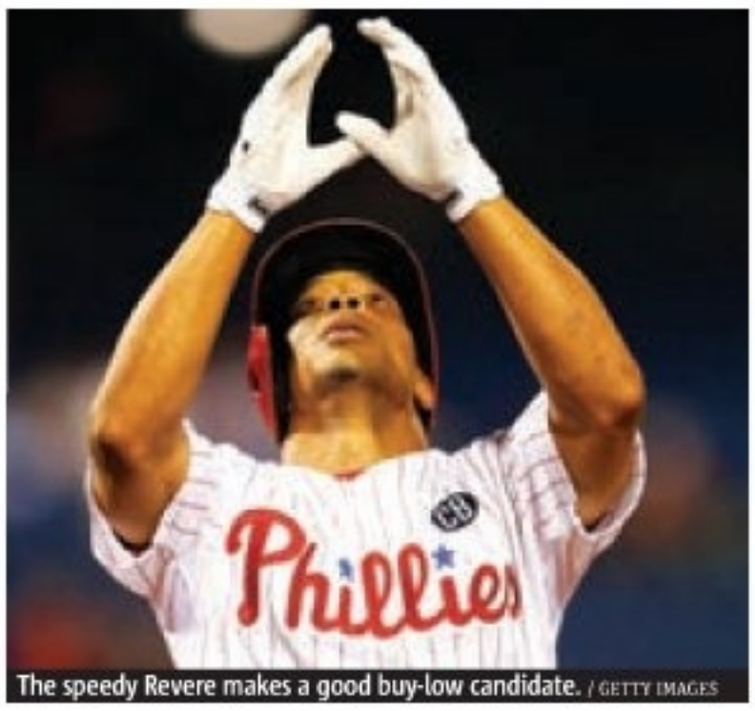
1. Timberwolves — Kevin Garnett is a free agent and Nikola Pekovic can't stay healthy. Likely pick Karl Towns will have a lot on his plate early.
2. Lakers — The frontcourt of the future for L.A. should be polished low-post scorer Jalil Okafor and Julius Randle.
3. 76ers — Guard D'Angelo Russell will go nuts as Philly's only real backcourt talent.

Progression

Ben Revere is still only hitting .264 on the year, which means he's only swiped nine bags. You have to get on first before you can steal. However, this is a guy that hasn't hit less than .294 in any of his last three seasons and has been at .305 and .306 in his two previous years with the Phillies. As his on-base percentage rises toward a career norm of .323, he'll get opportunities for his usual 35-45 steals. That means Revere, a nice buy-low candidate, projects for something around 30 steals the rest of the way.

Billy in Oakland

Billy Burns is baseball's best base stealer you've probably never heard of. He nabbed 179 bases in 385 minor league games and did it at an eye-opening 89 percent clip. Ever since the Athletics released Cody Ross on May 3, Burns has basically been an everyday player and has seven steals in 94 plate appearances. It's not a fluke and he's not going to slow down.



The speedy Revere makes a good buy-low candidate. / GETTY IMAGES

Will veterans block Flyers' top prospects next season?

NHL. Flyers GM Ron Hextall says he is open to making trades to help clear the way for some of the team's younger defensive talent.

The Flyers' four best defensive prospects may remain in hockey's minor leagues for a little bit longer than fans may have hoped. / GETTY IMAGES

Don't expect to see Sam Morin patrolling the blue line next season for the Philadelphia Flyers. Or, for that matter, Robert Hagg, Mark Alt or Shayne Gostisbehere.

The quartet, which makes up the best crop of defensive prospects the organization has possessed in decades, will have trouble stepping onto the ice at the Wells Fargo Center in 2015-16.

Unless there are some major personnel changes between now and the start of training camp in September, which General Manager Ron Hextall has acknowledged is in the plans, the four young D-men will likely be buried deep on the depth chart.

With the signing last week of defenseman Yevgeni Medvedev, who played in Russia's Kontinental Hockey League, the Flyers have eight defensemen under contract for next season and that doesn't include Michael Del Zotto, who is a restricted free agent and is expected to re-sign.

Although much can and probably will change on the blue line before the season opener, as it stands in the last week of May, the Flyers will also return Nicklas Grossmann, Mark Streit, Andrew MacDonald, Luke Schenn, Brandon Manning, Radko Gudas and Nick Schultz.

"We're going to have to do something," Hextall told reporters last week. "We thought Yevgeni was a real good, solid upgrade on defense and was someone we couldn't let go by. Something will have to give here, though."

Schenn and Grossmann are both in the final year of their contracts, which might make them more attractive to other teams — although neither would net much in return. MacDonald and Streit each carry a giant cap hit over multiple years and would be more difficult to move. Manning, who played well during his 11-game stint at the end of last season, could begin the year in the minors.

Even if the GM can swing a couple of trades, it will still leave the team with six to seven players in front of the young guys.

While most of the fan base would prefer to see one or two of the heralded prospects next season, Hextall is in no rush.

It explains why the organization went after Medvedev, who will turn 33 during the year.

"We want to get better today," said Hextall. "We look at [Medvedev] as a guy, hopefully, moving into the top of our D, not necessarily the one or two hole. The kids are not going to come in and necessarily be a clutch piece if they come in."

The key word is "if." Hextall has preached patience since the day he inherited the GM role. He has stated over and over that he is not going to rush the kids.

Right now, he couldn't expedite their arrival even if he wanted to.

"We're going to have to look at [possible trades]," Hextall said. "We're going to have to look to move somebody."

Or two or three.

Otherwise, don't expect to see Morin, Hagg, Alt or Gostisbehere skating on the Flyers' blue line in the fall.

Flyers' top prospects

A handful of Flyers youngsters made NHL.com's list of top prospects last season. Here's a quick look:

- No. 30: Scott Laughton, C — The forward got a good look with the Flyers down the stretch last season.
- No. 55: Robert Hagg, D — The second-round pick in 2013 has been a solid minor-leaguer and on the cusp of making the NHL.
- No. 58: Shayne Gostisbehere, D — He played some games with the Flyers in the fall before he was sent down.

Phils pummelled by Syndergaard, Mets in finale

MLB. The Phillies finished a stretch of 20 games in 20 days with a terrible setback against the Mets Wednesday.

Syndergaard was just the latest hurler to mow down the Phillies' league-worst offense. / GETTY IMAGES

The Phillies team that won seven of eight games a week go have vanished.

Philly lost its fourth straight game, dropping to 1-8 against the Mets this season after a 7-0 shutout loss Wednesday in New York.

Not only did the Phillies' pitching staff surrender four home runs, but one of them was blasted by Mets hurler Noah Syndergaard, his first career big-league dinger.

Sean O'Sullivan did his best to make it through seven innings to relieve an exhausted bullpen but his 11 allowed hits yielded seven earned runs as he was chased from the game.

The Phils' offense didn't put up much of a fight, slapping eight hits — seven of which were singles. Ben Revere and Grady Sizemore did have multi-hit games, but they were futile efforts in the face of two huge home runs from Lucas Duda, one from Michael Cuddyer and, of course, Syndergaard's blast.

In seven and one-third innings, Syndergaard struck out six and allowed six hits. He also went 3-for-3, as did Duda and Daniel Murphy, as the Mets compiled 12 hits in the win, lifting them to 27-21.

Philadelphia (19-30) will be able to rest up over the next few days, with an off day Thursday prior to three games at home against the Rockies. They will rest again Monday, June 1, before six more at Citizens Bank Park.

NBA Draft

Lakers could snatch Russell before 76ers have chance

D'Angelo Russell / GETTY IMAGES

The 76ers hold the No. 3 pick in June's NBA Draft and are in need of a scoring combo-guard.

Ohio State's D'Angelo Russell fits the bill, and is rated by many as the third-best prospect in the draft after big men Karl-Anthony Towns and Jahlil Okafor.

One of those two will almost definitely go No. 1 to the Timberwolves, but the Lakers could be a thorn in Philly's side. They invited the three aforementioned prospects to L.A. and have made it clear they are considering taking the guard. This would leave the 76ers with a killer decision over whether to add yet another seven-footer or take a different player, perhaps Emmanuel Mudiay.

"Obviously in this draft, you got two great bigs and you got a great point guard in Russell as well," Lakers coach Byron Scott told Jim Rome this week. "We got to wait and see what Minnesota does. So we are going to do our due diligence to bring them in and work them out and go from there." EVAN MACY
